Nomination Drive For Mrs. Caraway Opens Saturday

C. J. Chapin of Jonesboro to Be in Charge of Headquarters

OTHERS TO ARRIVE

Possibility of Nominations by Petition for Special Election Seen

LITTLE ROCK.—Friends of Mrs. Hattie M. Caraway who are sponsoring a campaign for her nomination for the unexpired term of her late husband, Senator T. H. Caraway, will open headquarters at the Hotel Marion Saturday, it was announced.

C. J. Chapin, secretary of the Jonesboro Chamber of Commerce, arrived here Friday night to make arrangements for the opening of campaign headquarters.

He said a large delegation of eastern Arkansas supporters of Mrs. Caraway, who now is in Washington preparing to serve as Arkansas' junior senator under a temporary appointment from Governor Parnell, will come to Little Rock Saturday after the mass meeting to be held in Jonesboro in the afternoon in the interest of her nomination.

A suite has been reserved on the second floor of the Marion. Mr. Chapin will be in charge of the headquarters until the state Central Committee meets Tuesday afternoon.

Not Interested in Long Term

"We are not interested in anyone's candidacy for the long term," Mr. Chapin said Friday night, "but the citizens of Jonesboro and eastern Arkansas and I believe a large majority of the Democrats of the state, believe that Mrs. Caraway should be honored with the nomination for the unexpired term of her late husband's term." "Senator Caraway had mapped out a program for the coming session of Congress and Mrs. Caraway is familiar with that program and will have details of the routine procedure of the Senate. She is capable of representing Arkansas in the approaching session and in the short session a year from now more efficiently than any new senator. Her friends at Jonesboro and Senator Caraway's friends are not opposing, exposing the cause of any candidate for the long term; we are fighting for her nomination for the remainder of the term her husband had been elected to serve."

Might Nominate by Petition

Reports that several persons are contemplating entering the race for the Senate at the special election to be held January 12, regardless of who may be nominated by the state Central Committee, gave rise to the question as to how such candidates could have their name placed on the ballot.

Members of the attorney general's staff said Friday, when asked about this matter by a Gazette representative, said an act passed in 1891 provided that candidates for state, district, county, township and ward officers may be nominated by petition of electors. The act provides that not less than 50 and not more than 1,000 signatures shall be required for state, district and county officers.

This method of nomination was specifically preserved in the initiated election law of 1917 and it has been used frequently by candidates for state and district offices and is the only method of nomination used in many cities and towns. It was said.

Several lawyers expressed the belief that a person so nominated could be designated as a Democrat, Republican Independent or as a member of any other party or group chosen by the petitioning electors.

Official of Coca Cola Company Passes Away

DALLAS, Tex.—(AP)—Daniel Beville Candler, 67, former vice president of the Coca Cola company, died Friday at his Dallas residence. He was a former resident of Atlanta, Ga.

He retired in 1928 after 40 years service with the company, of which his relative, Asa Candler was the founder. He acted as manager of the southwest territory, with headquarters at Dallas, for 37 years.

Thanksgiving Turkey Is Taken to Point Barrow

POINT BARROW, Alaska.—(AP)—A Thanksgiving turkey brought by dog team from Nome, 800 miles away, was served for white residents of Point Barrow, 350 miles inside the Arctic Circle—and old timers said they never knew of a turkey being brought to this settlement before.

At a dinner at the Presbyterian hospital, the handful of whites were the guests of Miss Little M. Bailey, the matron. Dr. Henry Griest led a simple service of worship.

Michigan Mother Finds Missing Son In Prison

Youth Serving 25-Year Sentence in Arkansas State Penitentiary

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—A Michigan mother whose college boy son disappeared and was missing for weeks has found him—a convict serving a 25-year term at Arkansas' state prison farm near here.

A story that appeared in a newspaper that her daughter chanced to read brought her quest to an end and led to the prison farm at Tucker, near here, where she found him picking cotton, the first cotton she had ever seen.

The boy is William Adams, 19, of Rogers City, Mich., a former student at Notre Dame.

His heart-broken mother is Mrs. Frank J. Adams, who rushed here to see him.

"Is that William?" asked the mother as her son was brought out of the cotton fields in prison garb, his black hair cropped close. Warden S. L. Todhunter left them as they fell into each other's arms.

Worried About His Comfort

Mother-like, Mrs. Adams inspected her son's sleeping quarters and the kitchen. She worried about his laundry and wanted to know if he had plenty of cover on cold nights.

"If we could have afforded to send him back to Notre Dame this year, this wouldn't have happened," Mrs. Adams told the warden. "But we couldn't. He couldn't get work. He didn't want to be a burden, so he left home."

With a Michigan companion, George Lamb, 20, William set out to seek work and adventure. They couldn't find work. But the adventure they sought landed them in the country jail at DeQueen, Arkansas.

On October 8, the boys stopped Noel Runyan, DeQueen auto salesman, and asked him for a ride. Runyan was hit over the head with a tire iron and thrown into a roadside ditch, unconscious. The boys were caught a few hours later.

Get Quick Sentence

At 9 the next morning, a special grand jury was convened. At 9:15 it brought in an indictment charging assault to murder. At 9:30 the boys pleaded guilty and were sentenced to 25 years each. This was less than 24 hours after the crime was committed. The sentence brought sharp controversy among many Arkansas newspapers and it was this controversy which got into the newspapers and was seen by William's sister, who told their mother that William was in prison for 25 years.

No Parole for Eight Years

Warden Todhunter cheered Mrs. Adams by assuring her that her son and his companion would both be eligible for parole after they had served one-third of their sentences. "I know William will be good, but eight years is a long time," Mrs. Adams said.

It will be the first time in her life, she said, that her boy has ever been away from her at Christmas. But there is still hope. Governor Parnell and the pardon board will be asked to do something about it.

Little Rock Motorist, Attacked In His Car by Eagle, Kills Bird

Robert W. Buckner Reaches El Dorado With Lacerated Face and Leg, Broken Windshield and Trophy With Seven-Foot Wing Spread

EL DORADO.—Robert W. Buckner of Little Rock, sales representative of the Lion Oil Company, forgot to get his Thanksgiving turkey, but when he arrived at the home of El Dorado friends Friday he brought 50 pounds of American eagle, a badly bitten leg and a lacerated face.

Mr. Buckner said he was driving from Little Rock to El Dorado. About three miles south of Fordyce he saw a black object in the road ahead. A second later the windshield of his car was shattered and he had an indignant eagle in his lap.

The eagle bit him on the leg twice and was starting in on other portions of his anatomy when Mr. Buckner found a tire wrench and killed the eagle.

He brought the bird to El Dorado, where it was placed on display in a filing station. The bird had a wing spread of seven feet. Game experts told Mr. Buckner, who intends to have the bird mounted, that it is one of the largest species of American eagle and that it is unusual to find so large a specimen in this section.

Statement Quoting Stimson Attacked By Japanese Gov't.

Confirmation of Press Reports Sought by Cable Saturday

ARE MISINFORMED

The Japanese Foreign Office Misinformed Friday on Statement

TOKYO.—(AP)—The Japanese government Saturday cabled Ambassador Deland at Washington requesting confirmation of press reports of Secretary Stimson's statement Friday expressing concern over the Manchurian situation and it was said in government circles if the reports were confirmed strong diplomatic representations will be made to the American government.

This state is regarded here as of an intimidating nature, and as "a virtual violation of the nine power pact," because it might serve to stiffen Chinese attitude regarding Chinese evacuation and eventually result in a clash between the Chinese and Japanese forces there.

A later report said that the news from Washington was mistakenly quoted by Japanese news agency sources and was not a paraphrase of what Secretary Stimson said but was material from various sources, much of which was previously published as statements of facts.

News dispatches which did not quote Secretary Stimson were erroneously published as direct quotations.

Is Misquoted

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Secretary Stimson reiterated Saturday he found it difficult to credit or understand dispatches telling of a Japanese advance on Chinchow in view of the Japanese assurances against hostilities in that quarter.

The secretary said that the Japanese foreign office was misinformed on his statement Friday.

Kiwanis Club Visit Old State Capitol

Washington Minister Is Principal Speaker on Interesting Program

Kiwanians ate turkey dinner Friday night at the Black Hotel in Washington, Ark., a hotel which is known far and wide for its excellent cooking. It was the Thanksgiving meet of this civic club.

Dr. J. C. Williams, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in that city was the principal speaker of the evening. He told of the illustrious citizens produced by or who had made their home in that community. These included Augustus H. Garland, United States Attorney General during Cleveland's administration; James K. Jones who made a record for himself and his state while serving as United States senator; and Albert Pike, father of Scottish Rite Masonry.

Dr. Williams invited the club to visit the Civil War state capital of Arkansas, which served as the seat of state government when the Federal troops captured Little Rock. One session of the state legislature was held in this building, he said. It served as a school house for many years after the civil war. Having decayed during all these years, it was restored to its original appearance as nearly as possible by the 1929 Legislature, through the encouragement of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Former Arkansas Bishop Reported Ill

Galien, Ohio.—(AP)—William Montgomery Brown, 77, a former Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Arkansas, was reported resting Saturday, despite valvular heart trouble and a nervous condition that has made him seriously ill, through not critically ill.

He was removed from the church after a herny trial in 1924.

His condition now is ascribed as overwork.

Two Texans Held; Kidnaping Charged

Clubman and 'College Kid Sheriff' Arrested for Abduction

DALLAS, Tex.—(AP)—Schuyler Marshall, Jr., known several years ago as the "college kid sheriff" of Dallas county and Herbert Scales, well known young Dallas clubman, are under arrest charged at Fort Worth with robbery with firearms and kidnaping, in connection with the holdup of Elbert Farr, power plant engineer at Mansfield, last Saturday.

Scales was arrested after Friday morning and a deputy sheriff left with him for Fort Worth. Marshall notified the sheriff's office he would surrender but was arrested between Mesquite and Dallas, as he was driving to the city from his farm home at Mesquite with his father.

Sheriff J. R. ("Red") Wright of Tarrant county said he would take Marshall to Fort Worth. Four other men were charged with them. Two were named Ray Thornton and Bud Mace, but the other two were identified only as "Mack" and "Bob."

The complaint charged that the men forced Farr to take a ride with them last Friday night for the purpose of "getting money from the Farmers and Merchants' State bank at Mansfield and the State Bank of Mansfield." They were accused of taking a shotgun and pistol from Farr.

Marshall was swept into office as sheriff in the general election of 1924 and served until his term expired on December 31, 1928. He was taunted by opponents because he was just out of college. He won their admiration a few months later when he defied a mob of 5,000 people which stormed the jail and attempted to lynch two negroes charged with assaulting two white women.

A few months later, Marshall added new laurels to his fame when he and six deputies led an attack which resulted in the surrender of Webb Martin, who with 12 other heavily armed men had barricaded himself in a house on the outskirts of Denton and defied 100 officers to take them.

Martin was charged with murder for the fatal shooting of Deputy Sheriff R. B. Parsons on the public square at Denton. Marshall has been asked by Denton officers to assist in his capture.

Marshall was a candidate for reelection in the July primary of 1928 but was defeated. He also won a night nomination in 1928 and 1930.

Walter Nelson Is Sentenced Quickly On Murder Charge

Admits Placing Dynamite in Store to Kill the Owner

CLERK IS KILLED

Proprietor Only Slightly Injured by Force of Explosion

HOT SPRINGS.—(AP)—Less than a week after he dynamited a store here in an attempt to kill the owner, but instead, caused the death of another man, Walter Nelson, 34, building contractor, pleaded guilty to a murder charge Saturday and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Indicted at a special session of the grand jury Friday, Nelson, 34, married of a down town novelty store, entered his plea when arraigned before Circuit Judge Earl W. W. Saturday and immediately was sentenced.

Nelson confessed soon after the explosion that he set the elaborate trap for Charles Weaver, whom he accused of threatening his life because of jealousy and Nelson's attitude toward Mrs. Weaver.

Weaver was slightly hurt and entered the store behind Donaldson Monday morning. Donaldson receiving the full force of the blast.

Tells of Trap

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(AP)—Walter Nelson, 34, building contractor, was indicted by the Garland county grand jury Friday on a first degree murder charge growing out of the death of D. Downs, 27, novelty store manager in an explosion at the store last Monday.

Pierce Widmer, 40, bookkeeper near here, also had been indicted to the indictment. The grand jury inquired into which Charles Weaver, 30, was killed. Nelson was charged with the killing of Weaver prior to the dynamiting by Nelson of Weaver's novelty store here last Monday.

Two fishing trips on which Weaver and Nelson took Weaver, and Nelson's death on each occasion, were described in Widmer's statement. Nelson was charged with the killing of Weaver on the first trip, when the two reached a designated place. The place went awry, the intended killer falling to show up, Widmer said.

On the other fishing trip, Widmer said he was not with Nelson and Weaver but Nelson told him about it. Nelson gave Weaver some liquor in which he had placed poison, and it was Weaver, ill, Widmer said.

Chief Winklin said this part of Widmer's statement was corroborated by J. D. Fragan, manager of another novelty store owned by Weaver, who was on the fishing trip.

Widmer said Nelson had told him several times that Weaver had threatened his life because of Nelson's intentions toward Mrs. Weaver. Nelson told him, however, Widmer said that he was not afraid of Weaver.

A special grand jury went into session Friday to investigate the explosion.

Nelson is in the state penitentiary at Little Rock for safekeeping. In his confession, he declared in detail how he set the trap for Weaver, and said he feared for his son life because of Weaver's alleged threats.

Arkansas Paying Off Loans Rapidly

$3,491,099 Already Has Been Repaid; State Heaviest Borrower

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Arkansas farmers have repaid $3,491,099.82 of the $8,205,857.96 borrowed last spring from the government in feed, seed and fertilizer loans, B. C. Powell, member of the national advisory committee, said Friday.

Powell, whose committee had supervision of loans made to purchase stock in agricultural credit corporations, attended a meeting of the committee in Washington, last week, returned Saturday night. He obtained the figures on the federal seed and fertilizer loans while in Washington.

The meeting of the national advisory committee was the first held in several months, and few sessions of the organization, formed by President Hoover and the department of agriculture, have been held since July.

Powell now is attending to business interests in the state.

Arkansas farmers were by far the heaviest borrowers from the fund, with Mississippi second, having borrowed $4,442,178.75. The amount which farmers in this state already have repaid is larger than any other state except Mississippi borrowed. The state has repaid 37.92 per cent of the loans, a considerable higher percentage than most of the 31 states whose farmers borrowed from the fund. Maryland farmers lead in percentage repaid, with 70.93 per cent but their total was only $106,075.52.

A total of $47,410,154.71 was borrowed in 31 states, and of this sum, $11,777,961.80 has been repaid of the total which has been repaid. Arkansas has repaid almost a third.

Walker Criticized At San Francisco

'Self Promoter' Should Attend to Own Business Says Paper

SAN FRANCISCO.—(AP)—Mayor Walker did not have much time Friday to study the Tom Mooney case, his mission to California. He spoke briefly at two luncheons, one a state affair and the other all women, reviewed one of the crack regiments of the United States army and had tea with a group of army officers and their wives.

Newspaper editorial comment on the mayor's presence in the state continued today, one for criticism and one of praise in two San Francisco papers. The first comment was made at Sacramento, the capital, by a state official Roland Vandegrift, state director of finance, said that his interest in the case was that of a private citizen.

"In Colomona's time," he said, "it was said of politics that if a ruler was having trouble at home he should start a war abroad. It seems to me that Mayor Walker has enough trouble to take care of at home without coming to interfere in what appears to be purely a California matter."

As Romance Passes

THE news that the English Channel boats which operate out of the Solent are to be changed from sail-driven cutters to steam tugs isn't particularly important, on this side of the Atlantic. A few people, though, will read it with regret.

It marks the passing of one of the last strongholds of the marlinpike seamanship of the old days.

There have been pilot boats in the Solent ever since the first sent merchant ships to distant seas; and through the centuries the men who manned these swift cutters have been seamen of the first order, able to keep their little vessels at sea in any kind of weather.

Of course, the new steam tugs will breed seamen, just as the old cutters did. Yet the change marks the loss by the old-time sailing ship of another province—almost its last. The steamship is almost universal now. One more link connecting the present day with the age of clipper ships is being snapped.

This, to be sure, is inevitable; and it may be that we spend more time than is good for us in lamenting the change from the picturesque and romantic old ways to the efficient new ones.

After all, these changes are taking place, and there isn't anything we can do about it except make the best of it. We can't swim upstream, no matter how much we might like to.

Our grandfathers may have lived in a world that was more colorful than our own, but we can't get back to it.

In fact, we are very likely cheating ourselves when we mourn the departure of the sailing vessel, the stage coach, the steamy Mississippi river steamboat and those other adjuncts of the past. Keeping our eyes on them, we fail to see the colorful things that our own age provides.

What, for instance, is more purely romantic than an arm plane, splitting the sky at midnight, its motor droning high above sleeping villages? Can't a railway train, symbol of controlled power, be a thing of beauty? Isn't the man who sits on a two-weeks' auto tour doing something for which the men of the old days would devoutly envy him?

Football Fatalities

IT IS very disturbing to read that more than a score of American boys have been killed in the game of football this fall.

Football, in many ways, is a very fine game. Certainly it provides pleasure and wholesome recreation for many thousands of youngsters each year. And, considering the numbers that indulge in it, the fatality list is not indicative of such a terribly high percentage of risk.

And yet—that toll is a dreadful load for any game to carry. It is a load no other sport has to carry. It is hard, too, to see just how the game can be modified to remove the element of risk. Football is essentially a game of violent bodily collisions. Remove them, and it is no longer football.

A country that kills 30,000 people a year with its autos doesn't worry much about fatal accidents. But the football situation is beginning to be extremely disturbing.

Revolutionized War

A PICTURE page from the Illustrated London News gives photographs of the way in which British troops were taken to the island of Cyprus by airplane to put down the recent riots there; and the whole thing provides a striking example of the way in which warfare has been revolutionized.

The revolution, it seems, has operated chiefly in favor of the strong. What chance has an insurrectionist movement, when the ruling class can call down troops out of the sky on a few hours' notice? How can a revolt make headway against modern armies equipped with airplanes?

A band of fighting men today is helpless unless it is equipped with all of the most modern inventions. Those who expect such a country as India, for instance, to break away from the British empire by force might ponder on that fact for a while.

Dreiser's Investigation

THE American public, very likely, would like to know whether there is any truth in the state of Kentucky's charges that Theodore Dreiser has been guilty of immoral conduct, criminal syndicalism, and so on. But first it would greatly prefer to learn whether there is any truth in Dreiser's charges against the Kentucky coal barons.

Dreiser charges flatly that striking miners' homes are dynamited and burned, that children in the coal fields are dying at the rate of seven or eight a week of undernourishment, that local officials regard themselves as agents of the mine owners and that the pay of the miners has been forced down to 80 cents a day.

Those charges are exceedingly serious. The public would like to know if any or all of them are true—and it is willing to let the counter-charges against Dreiser rest until it finds out.

then waits out of here, and he damned quick about it." There was an exchange of something from hand to hand—De Loma looked about and shifted restlessly. At any moment he might bolt for it. She realized suddenly that they did not know of the presence of her handbag in his pocket, or they would not let him go so easily. It was up to her to stop him.

"Don't leave me!" she cried, leaping up and grasping his arm. "Help me get him to a doctor—there must be one in the hotel somewhere."

Dirk's bloodless face frightened her. The portly manager arose from having made a gentle thumbing of the hurt ankle, and reported, "He's just wrenched it. Don't try to bring him to! He's better off that way until he's moved."

He dusted off his hands briskly. "Lift him, you two," he indicated the stalwart gentlemen who had been banking De Loma with gentle but firm insistence. "Now, where to? What's his room number? Anybody know? Where've his friends gone?"

Where, indeed? For the first time Mary remembered Cornelia and Ethel. They had disappeared. "I'll take care of him," Mary put in.

THE manager caught a glimpse of pleading, tear-filled eyes. A glance showed him that Dirk still was unconscious. The man must be gotten out of there quickly—it little mattered where. Most of the diners had already returned to their tables but the party would be ruined if the dancing was not quickly resumed. Anger followed alarm, and he fairly snapped out:

"Well, I don't care where you take him, just so you get him out of here! And you, too!" He whirled on De Loma, who was standing by, only too pleased to get off without a more rigorous calling to account. What was this putty little manager's ire, against a clean getaway with the Jupiter rubies in his pocket? He could afford to stand and take it; he did so, holding himself in tightly, the muddy yellow of his eyeballs showing below the half-hidden pupils. He looked like an animal about to charge.

Although he had made no protest, the manager yelled at him as if he had—mostly for effect.

"I don't know whose fault it was! I don't care. But if you're still here in five minutes I'll call the police—the lot of you! Where do you think you are? You New York rowdies come down here and think you can—"

His muttering trailed off as he bustled away, scattering a gaping group of waiters with snarled commands, vigorously nodding to the orchestra leader who obediently struck up a noisy jazz number. An excited buzz of conversation rose in the dining-room as they left, surface order having been restored.

Now it became clear what had become of Cornelia and Ethel. With the instinct of self-preservation rising above every other consideration, they had allowed themselves to be taken in tow by a glittering dowager, who was taking it upon herself to see that they were shielded from unpleasantness. Mary recognized the woman, who was preparing to huddle her charges into the first elevator that came up, as a rich climber, who no doubt thanked her stars for this Heaven-sent opportunity of making herself "solid" with the right set.

What she did not know, however, was that the flower of the Tabernacle tomorrow would not be able to recall having met her. In the meantime, Cornelia and her chum would have sneaked away from the sordid scene of battle, and by the time the newspapers got wind of the affair, they would be safely entrenched behind their locked hotel-room doors. Dirk could look after himself! It was his fault, for having precipitated such a scene.

His fault! It was her own fault, Mary knew. And although she despised Cornelia for her heartlessness and self-interest, she also burned with shame for her own part in the ugly business.

Now Dirk was hers, for the time being. She would take care of him until the foot healed, at least. Then if he chose to go back to Cornelia, she would have to let him go. She hugged to her heart fiercely the hope that this time they would never be parted again.

THE manager dog-trotted ahead of them, clearing the way for the two men who were carrying Dirk—a waiter, and a tall young man with the build of a football player, who had volunteered to help.

The dowager, secretly hoping that the man was a reporter no doubt, threw her arms about the girls, showing them behind her.

"Sir! These young women have nothing to do with it. I refuse to permit them to be annoyed!"

"Madam, I don't know what you're talking about, but stand back away from the elevator, please. This man must be taken to a doctor."

Miffed, the lady huddled her chicks a few feet away. Dirk was lifted into the car and let down gently on the elevator man's stool. Dirk's eyes were closed and his lips drawn tightly back with the effort not to cry out. Mary could not hear the sight; he looked as if he might be dead. Her heart constricted cruelly.

She stepped on the elevator quickly, and beckoned De Loma after her. He hesitated, then followed.

It was at this point that Cornelia became aware of what was happening. In her desire to avoid undesirable notoriety, she had not noticed Mary's presence in the party until she was already on the car. Jealousy overcame discretion, and Cornelia rushed out, crying sharply "Stop! Don't let her—"

"All right, George," the tall man said hurriedly under his breath, and the elevator dropped suddenly, cutting off her words in mid-air. The car's plunge swung Dirk about, and he moaned faintly. Mary, clasping his shoulders with fingers like steel, to hold him motionless, pleaded with the operator to go more slowly. The car steadied, crawled smoothly down, bounded a little at the bottom, and that stage of the painful trip was completed.

"Now where to, lady?"

"Can you carry him a little farther—just to a taxi?" She remembered suddenly that she had been in a dinner-party before this had happened. "The check," she cried, impatiently. "Did anyone pay it?"

"You're with Mr. Jupiter's party, ain't you?" gasped the waiter, stoop-

SOCIETY NEWS

Mrs. Sid Henry Telephone 921

It's a good thing sometimes to be alone.
Sit calmly down, search every secret place.
Physically uproot the baneful seeds there sown.
Pluck out the weeds ere the full crop is grown.
Gird up the loins afresh to run the race.
Foster all noble thoughts, cast out the base.
Thrust forth the bad, and make the good thine own.
Who has this courage thus to look within.
Keep faithful watch and ward with inner eyes.
The foe may harass, but can never surprise.
Or over him ignoble conquest win.
Oh, doubt it not, if thou wouldst wear the crown.
Self, baser self, must first be trampled down.—Selected.

Monterey Mission

San Carlos de Borromeo at Monterey, California . . . where President and Mrs. Hoover were married.

Quaint old Monterey Mission was founded in 1770 when the Spanish discovered Monterey Bay, California. In the years to come it was to rise to a pinnacle of importance among the Franciscan missions of California, only to be succeeded by another mission, and then, in turn, to succeed that one.

And in later years it was to be the wedding place of Herbert Hoover and Lou Henry. Monsignor Ramon Mesires, their friend, who was pastor of the church for years, married them there.

Father Junipero Serra, the zealous Spanish Franciscan friar who founded the churches on California's famous Mission Trail, established Monterey Mission June 3, 1770.

He named it Mission San Carlos de Borromeo.

Some time later the good father decided this was not the best place for his mission. He chose instead a site seven miles distant on the Carmel river. There was built Mission San Carlos de Borromeo del Carmelo.

And Carmel Mission was established as the home mission.

San Carlos de Borromeo became the parish chapel. Years passed. In 1833 the missions were secularized. Their goods were disposed of, and Carmel Mission started falling into ruins.

Gradually the paintings, vestments, relics and records of Carmel Mission were transferred to Monterey Mission.

Monterey Mission—the second mission built in California—is still the official church of Monterey. It is perhaps the best preserved of all the old missions.

It is built of white stone, cruciform, with a nave 120 by 30 feet. Its facade is elaborately decorated in 18th century Spanish style.

Whale vertebrae form the paving in the approach to the church.

The Monterey Mission—as it usually is called to distinguish it from the Carmel Mission—is visited by thousands of persons yearly, due to its historic significance, and because its relics not only include the original records of Father Serra but portions of the oak tree under which mass was celebrated when Viscaigne visited Monterey in 1602.

AT THE THEATRE

Today's Stars Meet
Idol of Yesterday

When the Fox dramatic production, "Over the Hill," opens at the Saenger Theatre Sunday local moviegoers will see a photoplay that has a history of its own and that serves in its present version as a short saga of Hollywood. It brings together the past and the present, the stars of today and a star of yesterday.

Fresh from their triumph in "Bad Girl," James Dunn and Sally Eilers appear in the romantic lead, while in the beloved role of "Ma," Shelby is a player whose fame goes all the way back to "The Birth of a Nation." She is Mae Marsh, who at the persuasion of Mr. Winfield Sheehan, Fox Vice President and General Manager in charge of production, undertook the assignment of shepherding a flock of cinema children after years spent in raising her own small brood.

The exploits of Dunn and Eilers are too fresh in the memory of the picture public to require explanation and repetition. Dunn, now both sprung out of the past, true stars should, taking the place of "Ma" and "Ma" in the picture, be the stars of the picture.

And the name of Mae Marsh, not so fresh as her two costars, still reverberates in the minds of movie fans.

Mae Marsh has never been away from the thoughts of Hollywood moviegoers. "Ma" and "Ma" have been pillars to some of the greatest pictures that have been made in the history of the cinema. But it was not until she starred in "Over the Hill" that she again felt the urge of the screen.

In support of James Dunn, Eilers and Mae Marsh are James Kirkwood, Claire Maynard, Crandall, William Pawley, Oliver Land and Joan Peers. The film is directed by Henry King.

with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Sutton of Jaga Jones last week. Born to Mr. and Mrs. McPherson November 21, a son.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor of Dallas, Tex., were visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sutton Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Spears were visitors in Washington Saturday. Dewey Worley attended the all day celebration at Blevins Friday.
